Nathan Khosla is a senior research scientist at the Lockheed Martin Advanced Technology Center. His background is in physical chemistry, and his current research pursuits include the development of nanoparticle-based inks for electronics applications, additive manufacturing and rapid iterative design processes for electronics manufacture, and synthetic biology for bio produced designer materials.