

Biography – Dr. Neil Poole

Dr Neil Poole is currently holds the position Chemistry Fellow, working in Henkel's Electronics Materials Technical Service group. He is responsible for supporting all of Henkel's electronics materials product portfolio, specializing in working with key global customers in both the automotive and commercial electronic industries. Neil graduated with his B.Sc. and Ph.D. from the University of Edinburgh in Scotland. Since then he has held a variety of positions both in the general chemicals R&D gaining several patents, for the last 20 years he has been working in electronic materials. He has authored many papers on such diverse topics as heterogeneous catalysis, printing surface mount adhesives, solder joint reliability and underfills.